Unjani Clinics "Empowering Healthcare"

Unjani* - "How are you?"

With 58 million people in our beautiful country, and more than 80% relying on the public sector for their healthcare needs; enabling equitable, quality access to primary healthcare with limited health professional resources, ageing infrastructure, dated legislation and underutilisation of technology; seems like an impossible ask! However, over the past 5 years through a bold and disruptive service delivery model known as the Unjani Clinic Network, we have empowered professional nurses to provide access to quality, affordable primary healthcare; while at the same time equipping them to operate and ultimately own container clinics in low-income and rural communities. Through the use of technology, health outcomes and impact are tracked, while simultaneously building sustainable micro enterprises that create new jobs and provide social value to the communities they serve.

Currently 10 million people fall into the employed, uninsured category. They have access to some resources to acquire healthcare services but cannot afford private sector pricing. This is Unjani's current target market.

Sustainable Development:

Unjani Clinics drive SDG's 3, 5, 8 & 17 through providing community access to affordable quality care; creating business opportunities for women (professional nurses); creating new, meaningful jobs and partnering for success.

Enhancing Healthcare Access through the Unjani Clinic Network

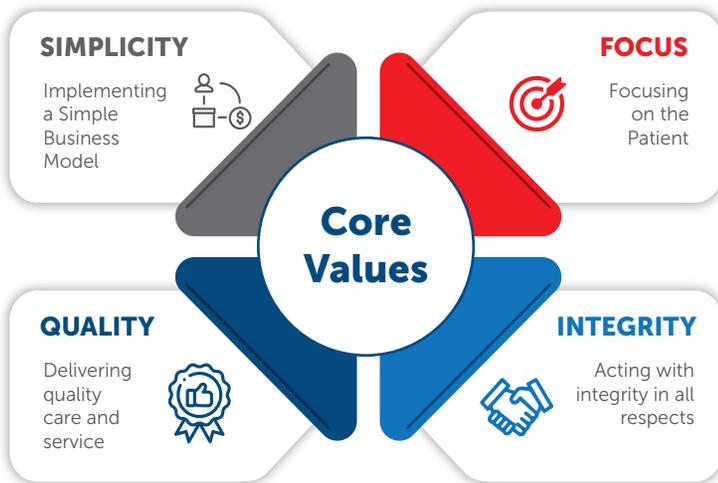

We have aggressive plans to scale the Unjani Clinic Network in order to make a real impact on the South African population and enhance access to healthcare.

Unjani Clinics NPC is a non-profit company and public benefit organization established to raise funding; implement clinics; train, manage and mentor the nurses that join the Network.

R127m in funding raised to date

At 1000 Clinics, 6 million people will have improved access to healthcare annually and 3500 jobs will have been created.

Unjani Clinics are:

- Proving the potential of task shifting to skilled nurse practitioners in delivering primary care, with referral to doctors when outside their scope of practice
- Demonstrating the role that private service providers can play in achieving Universal Healthcare Access
- Showing the power of partnerships in achieving great outcomes

Why not join us in our quest to make the impossible, possible, for many more South Africans? Your funding contribution could have the impact reflected in the table and create more access, more business opportunities and more meaningful jobs.
